Hongkone, July 87H, 1880.

Wm note, by the London papers received, per the English mail yesterday, that the debate on the Opium Question in the House of Commons on the 4th instant originated out of motion by Mr. J. W. PEASE, the Quaker member for South Durham. The hon, memterms :- " That this House is of opinion that mission into China for all exports from Great Britain, India, and British possessions on the Government of China is unwilling to grant; and this House is also of opinion that | by natural causes was returned. her Majesty's Government should encourage the Government of India to take steps for their gradual withdrawal from participation in the cultivation of the poppy and manufacture of opium, and dependence on a revenue derived from its cultivation and The report of the debate had not been published when the mail left, but the motion appears to have given rise to some discussion. The Marquis of HAR-TINGTON, Secretary of State for India, seems, to have given little encourage. ment to the Anti-Opium agitatore, judging from his remarks as telegraphed to the Indian papers, to hope for any speedy esponsal of their cause by the Government. The motion is, however, more moderately very peculiar signification. It may well be supframed than we expected. Mr. PEASE apimmediate abolition of the opium trade (wenerosity was in truth a tribute of admiration would be to ensure the instant defeat of the cause of which he has constituted himself had awakened their warmest feeling. The Secretary of State for India simply pointed to the condition of Indian finance, and declared it impossible; and there the matter rests. It will be interesting to read the full report of Lord HABTINGTON'S reply, and see if he hold out any hope to the Anglo Oriental Society for the future. This is hardly probable, looking to the vast interests concerned and the extreme difficulty of finding any source of revenue likely to yield the equivalent of that derived from the cultivation and sale of opium. Besides, the immorality of the proposed dividend, at the rate of four per cent.
